4.0 Showing signs of neglect

😊 · The young woman on the front desk was friendly and pleasant.

😞 · Cube has been open "about 5 years" and shows signs of neglect (peeling paint on the walls, badly chipped veneer on the bunks, broken doors on the lockers). The men's urinal smells. The bedsheets need replacing. The air con needs servicing. The "double bed" is maybe 20 cm wider than the single bunk. Overall cleanliness is poor. The Cube is tucked in the back of a grubby cull-de-sac off the main street. I generally avoid the Silom area unless I have a specific reason to go there. It's all hustle and hype and heavily touristed. I have stayed in much better hostels for less money.

5.0 Clean and functional. Good pit stop if you need to be in this area.

😊 · Full marks for cleanliness and functionality. Shelf and hook in the shower (not something you get everywhere). Good location with lots of inexpensive places to eat in the area.

😞 · I prefer a fully enclosed berth in a dorm so you are not disturbed as much by people coming and going. No control over the air con. It's in a very busy area so will get noise from the traffic. Also a low, intermittent hum from the air conditioner. I understand the need for rules but kind of in your face here.

7.0 Satisfactory pit stop for one night

Whatever the subject of the review, there will be an underlying structure.

Book Review

First, a review gives the reader a concise summary of the content. This includes a relevant description of the topic as well as its overall perspective, argument, or purpose.

Second, a review offers a critical assessment of the content. This involves your reactions to the work under review: what strikes you as noteworthy, whether or not it was effective or persuasive, and how it enhanced your understanding of the issues at hand.

Third, in addition to analyzing the work, a review suggests whether or not readers would benefit from reading it.

What is the difference between these two reviews?

Bhira Songsaeng. "Terry Erle Clayton's "Ten Tips for Managing Multi-author Teams" is a short publication providing concise pointers to guide authors about the seemingly simple, yet complex process of working on multi-author publications.

Short summary

These fundamental tips are experienced-based and act as a practical outline for a productive, efficient, and effective work environment. The author's tips highlight the importance of both teamwork and time management, emphasizing the distribution of the workload and ensuring a set of rules are applied. Furthermore, it also looks into the issues regarding the lack of clear communication between individuals which in turn, results in uncoordinated actions to occur. Besides that, the guide offers various examples of situations where contrasting authors may face and suggests possible solutions which can be adapted to handle such situations.

Critical assessment

Overall, I highly recommend these ten tips for writers who are a part of 'multi-author' working environments to get a better understanding of the process involved."

Recommendation

6258078356. "Ten tips for managing multi-author teams" by Terry Erle Clayton 4/5. The article is simple and straight to the point, no time was wasted.

Critical assessment

All those tips are really useful for daily life as we often need to work as a team."

Literature Review Outline

Note how the author did the following:

Wrote the items in such a way each line can be turned into a Level 2 or Level 3 heading

Did not use the article titles in the outline, but created themes

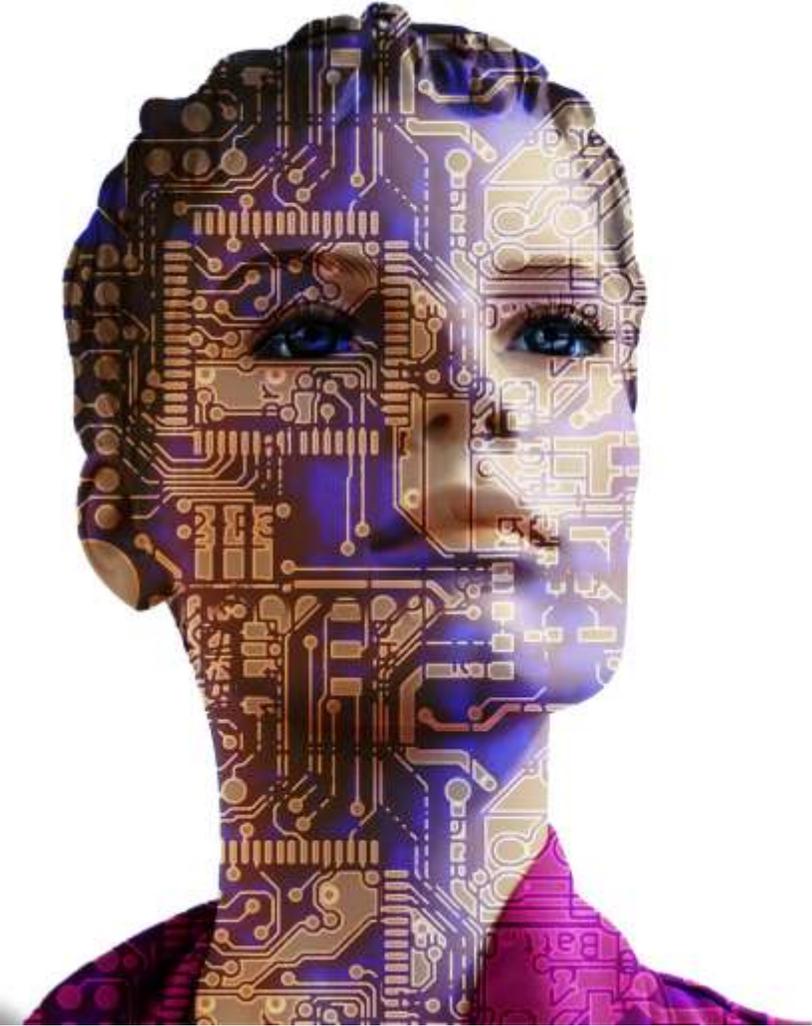

Used more than one source, when similar authors said the same thing

Moved logically from one topic to the next. That's one of the reasons to write an outline.

After an introduction and history, moved to possible causes for the problem, then moved to proven solutions to remediate the problem

Topic: Improving job satisfaction for teachers who work with special education students by implementing a peer collaboration program.
